County Loses 900 Farms Census Figures Show

Figures from the 1959 census of agriculture just released show a net loss of over 900 farms in Lancaster county since 1954.

Of the loss, 197 farms were lost because of the change in definition of a farm by the Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Census The figures show Lancaster County had 5,690 commercial farms in 1959.

Dairy again led the list in number of farms with a total of 1,706. General farms were in second place with 1,276 while livestock farms other than dairy and poultry ranked third with 1,218. Poultry with 906 farms was followed by crop farms with 386, tobacco farms with 330, and vegetable farms with 55. There were 45 farms classified as cash grain farms and 11 called other field crops. Sixteen farms were classified as fruit and nut farms. One large group of farms listed as miscellaneous and unclassified totalled 1,503.

Of the commercial farms in the county only 329 had a gross income of $40,000 or more in 1959. The largest number, 2,190, ranked in class three with between $10,000 and $19,000 in total sales for the year.

The figures also show that the farms tended to get larger during the five years. While the number of farms over 500 acres remained constant, the number of farms between 200 and 499 acres increased from 49 to 53 and those between 100 and 199 acres rose from 443 to 504. Farms with 50 to 99 acres decreased in number from 2.517 to 2,339 while the smaller farms, 30 to 49 acres decreased in number from 1,501 to 1,328.

One interesting sidelight shows that county farmers used more fertilizer on their crops during 1954 than during 1959.

While the ownership of most equipment and conveniences by farmers increased, the tables indicate that 311 fewer farmers had telephones last year than had them five years ago.

More farmers have full ownership of their farms and more have part ownership, but the number of tenants has declined.

Manheim Beef Rosette Goes To Glen Foreman

Glen Foreman, Manheim R3 came within one first place of making a clean sweep in the Baby Beef show at the Manheim Farm Show Wednesday night.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Foreman, a two time winner of the Beef steer competition at the Pa. State Farm Show, in addition to garnering the grand championship ribbon, took honors for fattest steer and showmanship He finished second behind Marlin Cassel, Manheim R1, in the fitting contest.

Runner up in the judging was the angus exhibited by Arlene Long, Manheim R4. Miss Long placed fourth in both the fitting and showing contests.

In contention for the crown in the hard fought grand championship scramble was John Henry Hess, winner of the Hereford judging, with the steer he won last year at the Penna. Livestock Exposition's calf scramble. The Shorthorn champion was shown by Kenneth Miller of Manheim R2.

Foreman, showing a Glen Angus, Maryland-bred steer, has his sights again set on the big prize he first won

Henning Answers Ag. Critics At Business-Farm Day Meet

Most of the criticisms of agriculture can be classified into about three categories, Dr. William L. Henning, Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture told the farmers and businessmen at the second annual Business-Farm day Thursday.

Henning speaking to the over 200 farmers, businessmen and their wives at the Guernsey Sales Pavilion, listed the three criticisms as: first, farmers are already rich — why make them richer by giving them subsidies; second farmers are the principal group in our society who receive subsidies and market protection; third, agriculture is a declining industry and has become relatively unimportant.

The Secretary went on to illustrate each of these criticisms with quotations from city newspapers and national magazines, and then refuted each contention with comments of his own.

Secretary Henning said he had no complaint with the agricultural writers and farming newspapers which generally do not attempt to mislead the urban dwellers.

Speaking of the first category of criticisms, Dr. Henning said, the average commercial farm family earned $5,415 in 1956 while the average non-farm family had an income of $6,900 or $1500 a year more than the average farm family.

Farmers are not the only segment of the economy taking subsidy payments; in fact they are not taking as much as are some other sections of the nation's industry the Secretary pointed out. He then mentioned many other forms of subsidy payments made by the Federal government to other sections of industry.

"There has been some price fixing in agriculture," Dr. Henning said, "But it is relatively minor compared with price fixing in non-farm in-

Fluid Milk

Production Up In All Areas

Fluid milk production was generally on the increase or at least well maintained in all areas. Supplies were liberal and freely offered in all instances.

As a result of heavy supplies, excess supplies in the New York milkshed were being channeled into manufacturing.

Demand for bottling was only fair with interest in cottage cheese also lighter. Wholesale selling prices in New York ranged $5 50 to $5.65 per 40 quart unit.

FROM WHERE WE STAND -

A Fable For Modern Times

Long ago in a far-away country, a king built a great wall. "Now," said the king, "That wall will protect the country from those who would break in and steal the treasures of the kingdom."

The king was very proud of the wall and the subjects were happy in the knowledge that they were secure from those who would break in and steal the treasures.

All the traders who came to the country knew they must beware for this country had its great wall to protect it, and all who knew of the defenses of the country learned to respect it.

Even those who had no part in building the great wall and even refused to use it walked in the shadow of the wall and felt secure in the knowledge that the wall was there.

So secure did the people feel that soon they used the wall less and less for defense. It was there and everyone knew it would always be there.

So secure did the people feel that they did not even notice that while they walked in the shadow of the great wall some of the mortar began to fall out and some of the stones dropped away.

The king saw that the wall was in danger of decay, but when he called the people to help repair the damage caused by neglect and disuse, the people said, let it fall down, no one has attacked us for a long, long time. We do not need the wall any longer.

And so the wall fell.

In a newer time and nearer country, the leaders of a great industry built a defense against those who, through sharp trading practices, could come into the industry and carry off the grower's fair share of profits. "Now," said the leaders of the industry, "The Lancaster Poultry Exchange will protect the industry from those who would carry off the grower's fair share of the profits."

The leaders of the industry were very proud and the gdowers were happy in the knowledge that they were secure from those who would take from them their share of the profits.

All the traders who came to the Poultry Exchange knew they must beware for they had to be bonded and their financial records could be inspected. They learned that they had to bid competitively for the product or some other trader would take it all.

Even those growers who had nothing to do with the Poultry center and did not even use its facilities benefitted from it since almost all poultry in the area is bought on the prices established at the auction sales.

But now many growers who have poultry for sale have forgotten that prices have to have some basis. Too many growers are accepting the Poultry center as a price-setting agency rather than a marketing agency. But if the auction is to function as a price setting agency, it must have a sufficient volume to test the demand of the market.

Any line of defense weakens through disuse. Unless more poultrymen take advantage of the benefits available to them at the Poultry exchange, that line of defense against price maneuveding will weaken also.

Most of the reputable buyers are in favor of the auction sales. They can fill their needs at prices comparable to the prices paid by other buyers. They know that the bond protects them as well as the grower. They know that they can make other arrangements better with the grower if they do not have to dicker over price.

There are a few buyers, however, who would like to see the Poultry Exchange fall. You will hear them saying, The Poultry exchange is not needed any longer. No one has tried to under price poultry for a long time.

That is just the point. No one will try to under price poultry while the auction is there to dictate a fair and equitable price.

The more the Poultry Exchange is used, the stronger it will become. If the use of the facilities fall off to the point where this line of defense begins to weaken, then the entire wall is in danger of collapse.

At least that's how it looks from where we stand.

We Worship God

Lesson for October 9, 1960

WHAT does "worship" mean? We hear or read the word on all sides. We speak of "Public Worship;" some churches have what is called a "Directory for Worship," a manual telling how it should be done Some churches have books called a "Book of Common Worship." Exactly what is worship?

Dr. Foreman

Let us write-off two common uses of the word. One is any use of it that has to do with human beings only, as when we say that a mother worships her child, or a girl worships her lover. This has some meaning, but not what we are after. We also put aside a notion of worship that thinks of it as just the same as what is done in a church between (say) 11 and 12 on Sunday mornings.

What Worship Is Not

What does it mean to worship God? It does not mean to say nice things about him, or to pay him compliments, though this (on a high level) may be a part of worship. There used to be a popular, but irreverent, song, including the words "God is a livin' doll." Now that was a compliment, or intended as such, but it was a long way from worship. For the compliment was a cheap one, and the mood was flippant. The greatness of God was left clear out of sight. Worship, again, is not just the same thing as prayer, although all true worshippers pray. (These lessons will consider prayer in particular in November.) Further, worship is not just reverent thoughts about God. One may think good thoughts about a God one never expects to meet, and never tries to meet.

Worship is the response of a human being (or, we may add, an angel) who feels himself to be in the presence of God. What a man does under those circumst

China-Russia Rift

Washington diplomatic and military circles recently have been buzzing with reports of rising tension between Communistic China and the Soviet Union.

The reports, if true, could be the best cold war news in years. Differences between the two giant communist nations are said to be over whether to keep the cold war cold or make it hot.

Communist China leaders Mao Tse-tung and Chou En-lai are said to believe that World War III against Western nations is inevitable and to be desired by the communists. They are reported impatient with Premier Khrushchev's policy of co existence.

The reports would appear to support warnings made repeatedly in recent years by General Albert C. Wedemyer (ret) who probably knows China and the Chinese leaders better than any other American military man. He has warned of the ruthless and aggressive intentions of the Chinese leaders.

Russia Reluctant

U. S. State Department officials are convinced that Khrushchev does not want a war with the West and that he would start a war only if he became convinced communists could not, eventually, destroy democracy by other means.

Communist China is reported, on the other hand to be pressuring Khrushchev for direct military action This, diplomatic officials are careful to emphasize, does not mean Russia and China are about to end their military alliance.

The State Department late last summer briefed the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on the Russia-China situation at a closed door session. Later Senator Hubert Humphrey, a member of that Committee, gave the Senate a report without mentioning the source of his information.

"It would be wishful thinking," Sen Humphrey said, "to conclude that the two Communist giants are going to split any day. Nevertheless, it would also be foolish to ignore the fact that tensions do exist and that they seem to be increasing rather than diminishing.

Two Communist Capitals

"The Communist empire used to have one center — Moscow." Sen. Humphrey said. "Now, it clearly has two centers—Moscow and Peking. Moscow cannot be happy that its former unquestioned direction of the Communist movement has been challenged.

"China has begun operating its own foreign propaganda and economic aid program in competition . . . with the USSR. China has made a dramatic propaganda bid in Latin America and Africa, as well as Asia.

"The evidence at hand indicates Red China would like

MILKING TIME
By: j. o. E.

Sopping wet, old Suzie stands
Head bowed against the rain.
Her bulging quarters filled with milk
Can scarcely stand the strain

But patiently she stands and chews

She knows relief is on the way
For here comes milkmaid Kate.

The difference is that the price fixing in nonfarm industry is done privately, with a certain amount of government consent and help, whereas the price fixing in agriculture must necessarily be done by the government.

This situation leads the businessman and politician to confuse competitive free enterprise with the absence of government interference, Dr. Henning said, "They are inclined to think that the steel industry is a true example of private enterprise while they think of agriculture as a socialized non-competitive industry."

"A moment's thought will show that nothing could be farther from the truth." He said.

Agriculture is not a declining industry, but some editors can not resist putting agriculture headlines in the negative form, the Secretary feels. He pointed out the technological advances which have made it possible for a smaller percentage of the total population to produce the food and fiber for the rest of the nation.

"As the population grows, more farm products will be consumed . . . Hence, agriculture is a growing, not a declining, industry." Dr. Henning said.

The Secretary concluded by saying there are still those in this country who do not appreciate that it is America's productive agriculture and industry that have made America strong.

Some Suggestions To Help Reduce The Percentage Of Condemnation In Broiler Flocks

1. Practice a rigid culling program, starting on the first day. Remove all sick and ailing birds from the flock.
2. Provide adequate brooding heat.
3. Install a water medication system. Start necessary treatment immediately. Don't wait for the bulk bins to become empty.
4. Use a sound vaccination program.
5. Maintain better control of ventilation by use of heat in the winter and fans in the summer. Use of a maximum-minimum thermometer may be beneficial in keeping check on temperature fluctuations in the house.
6. Study condemnation report to see what you can do to decrease rejects.
7. Use disposal pits or incinerators to get rid of all dead birds.
8. Remove all birds from the broiler house. Don't leave any potential carriers of disease to spread the infection to the next brood.
9. Remove old litter immediately after flock is sold. Do not refill for at least two weeks.
10. Clean up poultry house promptly and thoroughly between each lot.

Best Food Buys

Broilers, Fryers Are Featured

Broiler-fryers promise to lead the parade of values at the meat counter in many local food markets this weekend reports Tom Piper, Penn State Marketing Agent. Shoppers would do well to buy several of these young chickens to keep in the freezer for frequent use.

Pork prices continue high as supplies remain below levels available last year.

Beef prices remain generally unchanged from levels prevailing last week.

Pumpkins and squash lead the parade of colorful items in plentiful supply now. Newly harvested Jonathan, Smokehouse, Stayman, Red and Golden Delicious apples are available at the lowest price for the season. Fresh apple cider is also available.

Fall supplies of cole crops —cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, and Brussels sprouts— are adequate and these items head the list of good buys in vegetables. Lower prices prevail on carrots, celery, lettuce, turnips and late season green beans.

The local harvest of tomatoes is winding up; supplies from California and Tennessee will sell at higher prices.

Special prices on cheese will continue through-out October.

Crop Summary

Frost Does Little Damage

HARRISBURG — Very little corn was damaged by scattered frosts over the weekend, the State Crop Reporting Service said this week in its roundup of crop and weather conditions.

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture agency explained that frost was most severe in localities where there is little corn grown.

Potato harvest is nearing a peak in Lehigh County and through nearby counties. Fields in extreme eastern counties are wet and rot and blight are a serious threat in fields where foliage was not dead before rains started.

Apple picking is in full swing with good volume. Color and quality of the fruit is excellent. The Erie County grape crop is being harvested and processing plants are busy.

Continued high humidity and too little air movement last week caused additional shed burn to recently harvested tobacco crops. Some small patches of tobacco are still not ready for harvest and growth is slow.

Silo filling is progressing rapidly in the county with most corn fields past the optimum stage of maturity for silage.

Pa. Farm Prices Were Higher In September

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania farmers averaged nearly 4 per cent more for agricultural products in mid September than a month earlier, the State Crop Reporting Service said today.

Higher pirces received for milk, eggs and fruit more than off-set the lower average prices for meat-type animals and vegetables. The mid-September price level was also 2 per cent above a year ago.

The index of prices received, which is the barometer of farm income, was 232 per cent of the 1910-14 base and 7 per cent above a year ago. The higher wholesale milk price, which showed the usual seasonal increase, plus higher egg prices more than off-set the lower prices for beef cattle hogs and sheep.
